THE STRUCTURAL ALTERATIONS ON LIBERTY SHIPS

CG 146

APRIL 1946

This book to remain in back of the information of all inspectors.

Since the inception of the Board to Investigate the Design and Methods of Construction of Welded Steel Merchant Vessels, numerous specific structural alterations have been made on U. S. Merchant Vessels. Such alterations have been made through the combined efforts of the U. S. Navy, American Bureau of Shipping, U. S. Maritime Commission, War Shipping Administration, and U. S. Coast Guard. They include the elimination of the square gangway cuts in the sheer strake of the Liberty ships, freeing of welded bulwarks from the top of the sheer strake on the Liberty ships, serration of bilge keels on both the Liberty ships and T2 Tankers, the installation of hatch corner reinforcement and riveted crack arrestors on Liberty ships, and the provision of extra longitudinal girders in the T2 Tankers. In addition, equivalent improvements have been made on all new designs.

This book concerns the structural alterations on Liberty ships only and these are intended to serve two purposes: namely, to eliminate as many crack starters as possible, and to introduce barriers to limit the progress of any crack which might start from an undetected origin.

Experience has shown that square corners very frequently act to initiate cracks. Accordingly, such corners were required to be rounded insofar as practicable, and, in the case of the hatch corners which are a proved source of difficulty, specific reinforcements were required to be added.

Figure 1 shows the original hatch corner reinforcement provided on most existing Liberty ships. On most new vessels, an improved corner reinforcement was fitted during the construction period. The reinforcement for these new vessels is shown in Figure 2. Orders for this change were issued in August, 1943. Some new vessels were fitted with different hatch corner reinforcements: Figure 4 shows one such reinforcement. Vessels already afloat and in service at this time were not reinforced at the hatch corners as shown in Figure 2. On these a rounded insert corner with face plate is being fitted as shown in Figure 3.

On the earlier Liberty ships, a bulb bar bilge keel was used. In welding the butts, care was seldom taken to see that the entire section was penetrated by the welding and a cavity was generally left in the heart of the bulb. The bilge keel is the outermost bottom fiber of the ship's hull girder and as the vessel bends and twists in the seaway, it is severely strained. About one half of the underwater shell fractures have been traced directly to a defective butt weld in a bilge keel.

In order to localize the effects of fractures emanating from such faulty welds, the bilge keels on the new ships were serrated. The serrations were arranged so that they fell in way of butt welds in both the bilge keel and the shell. In the case of existing vessels which had continuously welded bilge keels, provision was made for drilling or burning holes through the bilge keel, at the shell, in way of the bilge keel butt welds. Illustrations of the bilge keel modifications are shown as Codes 1, 2 and 3, in Figure No. 8.

Since there is the added possibility that cracks may emanate from undetected starters, such as cracked or imperfect welds, barriers were required in order to arrest the cracks before extensive damage resulted. From years of experience on riveted vessels, it is known that a riveted seam forms a barrier to a crack and, although an extensive study is still underway, no barrier has been found which is more satisfactory than a riveted seam. In altering the Liberty ships, riveted seams were added at each gunwale. This was accomplished by cutting either the stringer plate or the sheer strake and fitting a riveted gunwale angle or sheer strap, as shown in Figures 6 and 7. Since hatch corners had shown themselves to be the principal source of major cracks, another riveted seam was required in the upper deck, port and starboard, alongside the hatches as shown in Figure 5. When a vessel was not available for sufficient time to fit gunwale crack arrestors, an immediate temporary repair was made to relieve the effect of the square sheer strake cut at the gangway (See Figure 8).

In January, 1944, it was found that some of the Liberty ships which had been operated in extremely heavy weather had developed buckles in the bottom at the after end of No. 3 hold. These buckles occurred in both the bottom shell and inner bottom of the vessel. Not many vessels developed this buckling and it appeared that it was not serious enough to occasion concern. Therefore, no steps were taken except in the case of the Troopships and Hospital ships. Here, so many lives were at stake that it was thought advisable to take extra precautions and in these vessels, four additional longitudinal inner bottom girders were fitted.

NOTE: - For the purposes of this booklet, a "Troopship" is an EC2 dry cargo vessel converted to carry over 1000 troops, while a "Troop Carrier" is an EC2 dry cargo vessel converted to carry 1000 troops or less.

While all Liberty type vessels were required to be fully altered at the earliest possible date, alteration schedules influenced by limitations of repair facilities, by war necessities and by other factors enumerated below, were established for performance of the various items required. These schedules included alteration deadlines based on (1) availability, (2) service types, and (3) voyage routes of the vessels. Particular emphasis was placed on vessels fitted to carry troops and vessels scheduled to operate in cold and rough waters. These schedules were altered from time to time on the basis of performance data and changes in military requirements resulting from war progress.

Now that hostilities of World War II have ceased, a peacetime schedule for effecting the alterations has been established.

TIME LIMITS FOR PERFORMING ALTERATIONS

The current Coast Guard policy for time limits for performing structural alterations follows:

Troop Carriers, Passenger Vessels and Cargo Vessels Carrying Persons in Addition to the Crew

On and after 1 April, 1946, no certificates of inspection or waivers will be issued to permit the carriage of passengers unless all of the required structural alterations have been performed.

(Troop Carriers and Passenger Vessels include vessels carrying more than twelve passengers.)

Cargo Vessels Carrying No Passengers

On and after 1 July, 1946, no certificates of inspection will be issued to any cargo carrying Liberty ship unless all of the required structural alterations have been performed.

ALTERATIONS REQUIRED DURING CONSTRUCTION

The alterations required on each class of Liberty vessel which was under construction when the initial alteration program was put into effect are listed below. When all of the items listed have been accomplished, the work on the vessel is considered to be complete. The alterations for these vessels meet the fullest requirements contemplated for any existing Liberties of similar type and no further or alternate modification should be required.

General Cargo Vessels - EC2-S-C1 - (AK and XAK-1)

ALTERATIONS REQUIRED ON EXISTING VESSELS

The requirements for certain alterations on existing Liberty vessels have been modified from time to time as a result of service experience. The alterations required on each class of existing Liberty vessel are listed below according to the time intervals in which they were in force. In the tables, Pages 8, and 20 through 91, the work on existing vessels is indicated as complete when all alteration items required during the 23 June, 1945, to 1 April, 1946, period have been performed.

Note that after 1 April, 1946, Troop Carriers will no longer be considered completely altered unless they are fitted with crack arrestors on deck.

Minor alterations not listed below but covered by Alterations H and I of Plan FMM 17-S11-17-1 are required in way of the forward boat deck stanchions and the gangway access openings in the bulwarks; these were not required prior to 23 June, 1945.

NOTES REGARDING THE STRUCTURAL ALTERATION OF EXISTING VESSELS

Detailed structural alterations for Liberty type dry cargo ships, Tankers, Special Cargo vessels and Troop Carriers should be in accordance with Coast Guard Plan EMM 17-S11-17-1. Crack arrestors on the decks of Troop Carriers and Passenger Vessels should be in accordance with Coast Guard Plan MI 14-S11-17-1, Detail B.

ADDITIONAL NOTES REGARDING INBOARD CRACK (DECK) ARRESTOR INSTALLATIONS

1. The deck strap, Code No. 1, may be stopped at Frame No. 40 instead of running to Frame No. 39 as it is shown on the plans. The additional assurance gained by running this strap forward one additional frame space did not warrant the expense and delay incurred by interference with the sounding tubes at Frame No. 39.
2. On vessels whose hatch corners have been reinforced by Code Number 1, the deck slot should be made 32" from the hatch side instead of 28" as indicated on the plans. The centerlines of the straps are then 12'-8" from the centerline of the vessel forward of Frame No. 84 and aft of Frame No. 115 and there should be a clearance of 3" between the inboard edge of the strap and the outboard edge of the hatch corner doubler to permit caulking.
3. The slot in the deck may be stopped at the edge of the doubler around the companionway, Frame No. 93 to No. 95, and the 16" x 3/4" strap welded thereto, provided that rounded reinforcements with face plates are fitted in the corners of the companion opening so that the reinforced opening will have the strength to arrest a fracture which might cross the deck in this region (See Figure 9).
4. As an alternative to the above for the companionway at Frames No. 93 and No. 95, the companionway doubler may be trimmed back on the inboard edge so that it clears the outboard edge of the deck strap. The seam between the doubler and strap should then be welded with a deep "V" weld.
5. At other points, if companionways lie in the path of the deck strap, the cut should be carried right into the opening and its athwartship location should be altered by splaying outboard or inboard over a distance of not less than four frame spaces so that it enters the opening not less than 8" from the corner, (See Figure 10). Tapered liners should be used to carry the strap over existing doublers but if the deck is cut for the crack arrestor before fitting the companion doubler (as for a new companionway) the ends of the strap may then be welded to the edge of the doubler. In any case, the cut must go into the companionway.

NOTES REGARDING THE STRUCTURAL ALTERNATION OF EXISTING VESSELS

Details of structural alterations for Liberty type cargo ships, Tankers, Special Cargo vessels and Troop Carriers should be in accordance with Coast Guard Plans 17-211-1-1. Deck structures on the decks of Troop Carriers and Passenger Vessels should be in accordance with Coast Guard Plans 14-211-1-1, Detail B.

ADDITIONAL NOTES REGARDING INBOARD BRACK (DECK) ARRESTOR INSTALLATION

1. The deck strap, Code No. 1, may be stopped at Frame No. 40 instead of running to Frame No. 33 as it is shown on the plans. The additional assurance gained by running this strap forward one additional frame space did not warrant the expense and delay incurred by interference with the sounding tubes at Frame No. 33.

2. On vessels whose hatch covers have been reinforced by Code Number 1, the deck stiff should be made 3/4" from the hatch side instead of 2 1/2" as indicated on the plans. The centerline of the straps are then 12'-8" from the centerline of the vessel forward of Frame No. 33 and aft of Frame No. 115 and there should be a distance of 1" between the inboard edge of the strap and the outboard edge of the hatch corner doubler to permit caulking.

3. The stiff in the deck may be stopped at the edge of the doubler around the companionway, Frame No. 33 to No. 35, and the 18" x 3/4" strap welded thereon, provided that rounded reinforcements with loose plates are fitted in the corners of the companion opening so that the reinforced opening will have the strength to resist a fracture which might occur in the deck in this region (See Figure 9).

4. As an alternative to the above for the companionway at Frames No. 33 and No. 35, the companionway doubler may be trimmed back on the inboard edge so that it clears the outboard edge of the deck strap. The seam between the doubler and strap should then be welded with a deep "V" weld.

5. At other points, if companionways are in the path of the deck strap, the cut should be carried right into the opening and the companionway location should be altered by splicing forward or inboard over a distance of not less than four frame spaces so that it enters the opening not less than 5" from the corner. (See Figure 10). Tapered liners should be used to carry the strap over existing doublers but if the deck is cut for the track arrester before fitting the companion doubler (as for a new companionway) the ends of the strap may then be welded to the edge of the doubler. In any case, the cut must be into the companionway.

DETAILED RECORD OF STRUCTURAL ALTERATIONS

The following pages give a complete record of all the alterations that have been fitted on Liberty ships up to 1 February, 1946, and which have been reported to Headquarters. The code numbers for these alterations have already been described. Following the detailed record, there is an index of the names of the vessels arranged alphabetically, indicating the builder and hull number of each.

In preparing these forms, it was necessary to use certain abbreviations. The abbreviations used are listed below:

The dates are listed in three digits. The first two digits denote the month and the third digit the year. Such as:

February, 1945 = 025 December, 1943 = 123

This method of dating is used throughout the entire structural reinforcement record. Where the actual date of the alteration is uncertain, the date of the first submitted report preceded by the letter "B" (before) has been used.
